

HISTORY

When the Sisters of Saint Joseph arrived in McSherrystown, PA in 1854, the area was still part of the Diocese of Philadelphia (the diocese of Harrisburg was created in 1868).

The first sisters had made the trip by steam car as far as Hanover and then took a carriage to their new home that had been unoccupied for three years.

With the help of their generous neighbors they began the arduous tasks of cleaning the house and planting a garden. Within a short time, they opened St. Joseph's Academy and a Novitiate. At the request of Bishop John Neumann they also began to care for orphaned children and later for blind children. They were true to Bishop Kenrick's description of the Sisters of Saint Joseph: "Ready for any good work."

Currently there are just under 1,000 sisters who serve in 26 dioceses in the United States and in Canada. Support of the Sisters of Saint Joseph Golf Tournament will assist the Sisters in continuing their mission: "to live and work so that all people may be united with God and with one another."
